MASSAGE & RELAXATION

Full-Body Shower - Hydrotherapy

Hydrotherapy combines the effects of heat, massage, and relaxation. Warm water dilates blood vessels, facilitating blood flow to tissues. The resulting supply of oxygen and nutrients leads to faster recovery of tired muscles. Hydrotherapy is intended for people who prefer to be treated while lying above the water.

The full-body shower

Before the session begins, the mattress is warmed up, ensuring a comfortable feeling when you lie down. First, you'll experience a warm shower over your entire body; gentle water jets create a tingling sensation. Next, the individual jets turn on and off in a wave-like pattern. After that, the individual waterfalls take over; these are stronger jets. The final part of the session consists of cold mist jets.

Various programs with different water temperatures are available.

Full-body shower combined with a manual massage

It's also possible to give an oil massage on the bed before the full-body shower. The body can then be rinsed off with water.

Full-body shower after a steam bath or sauna session

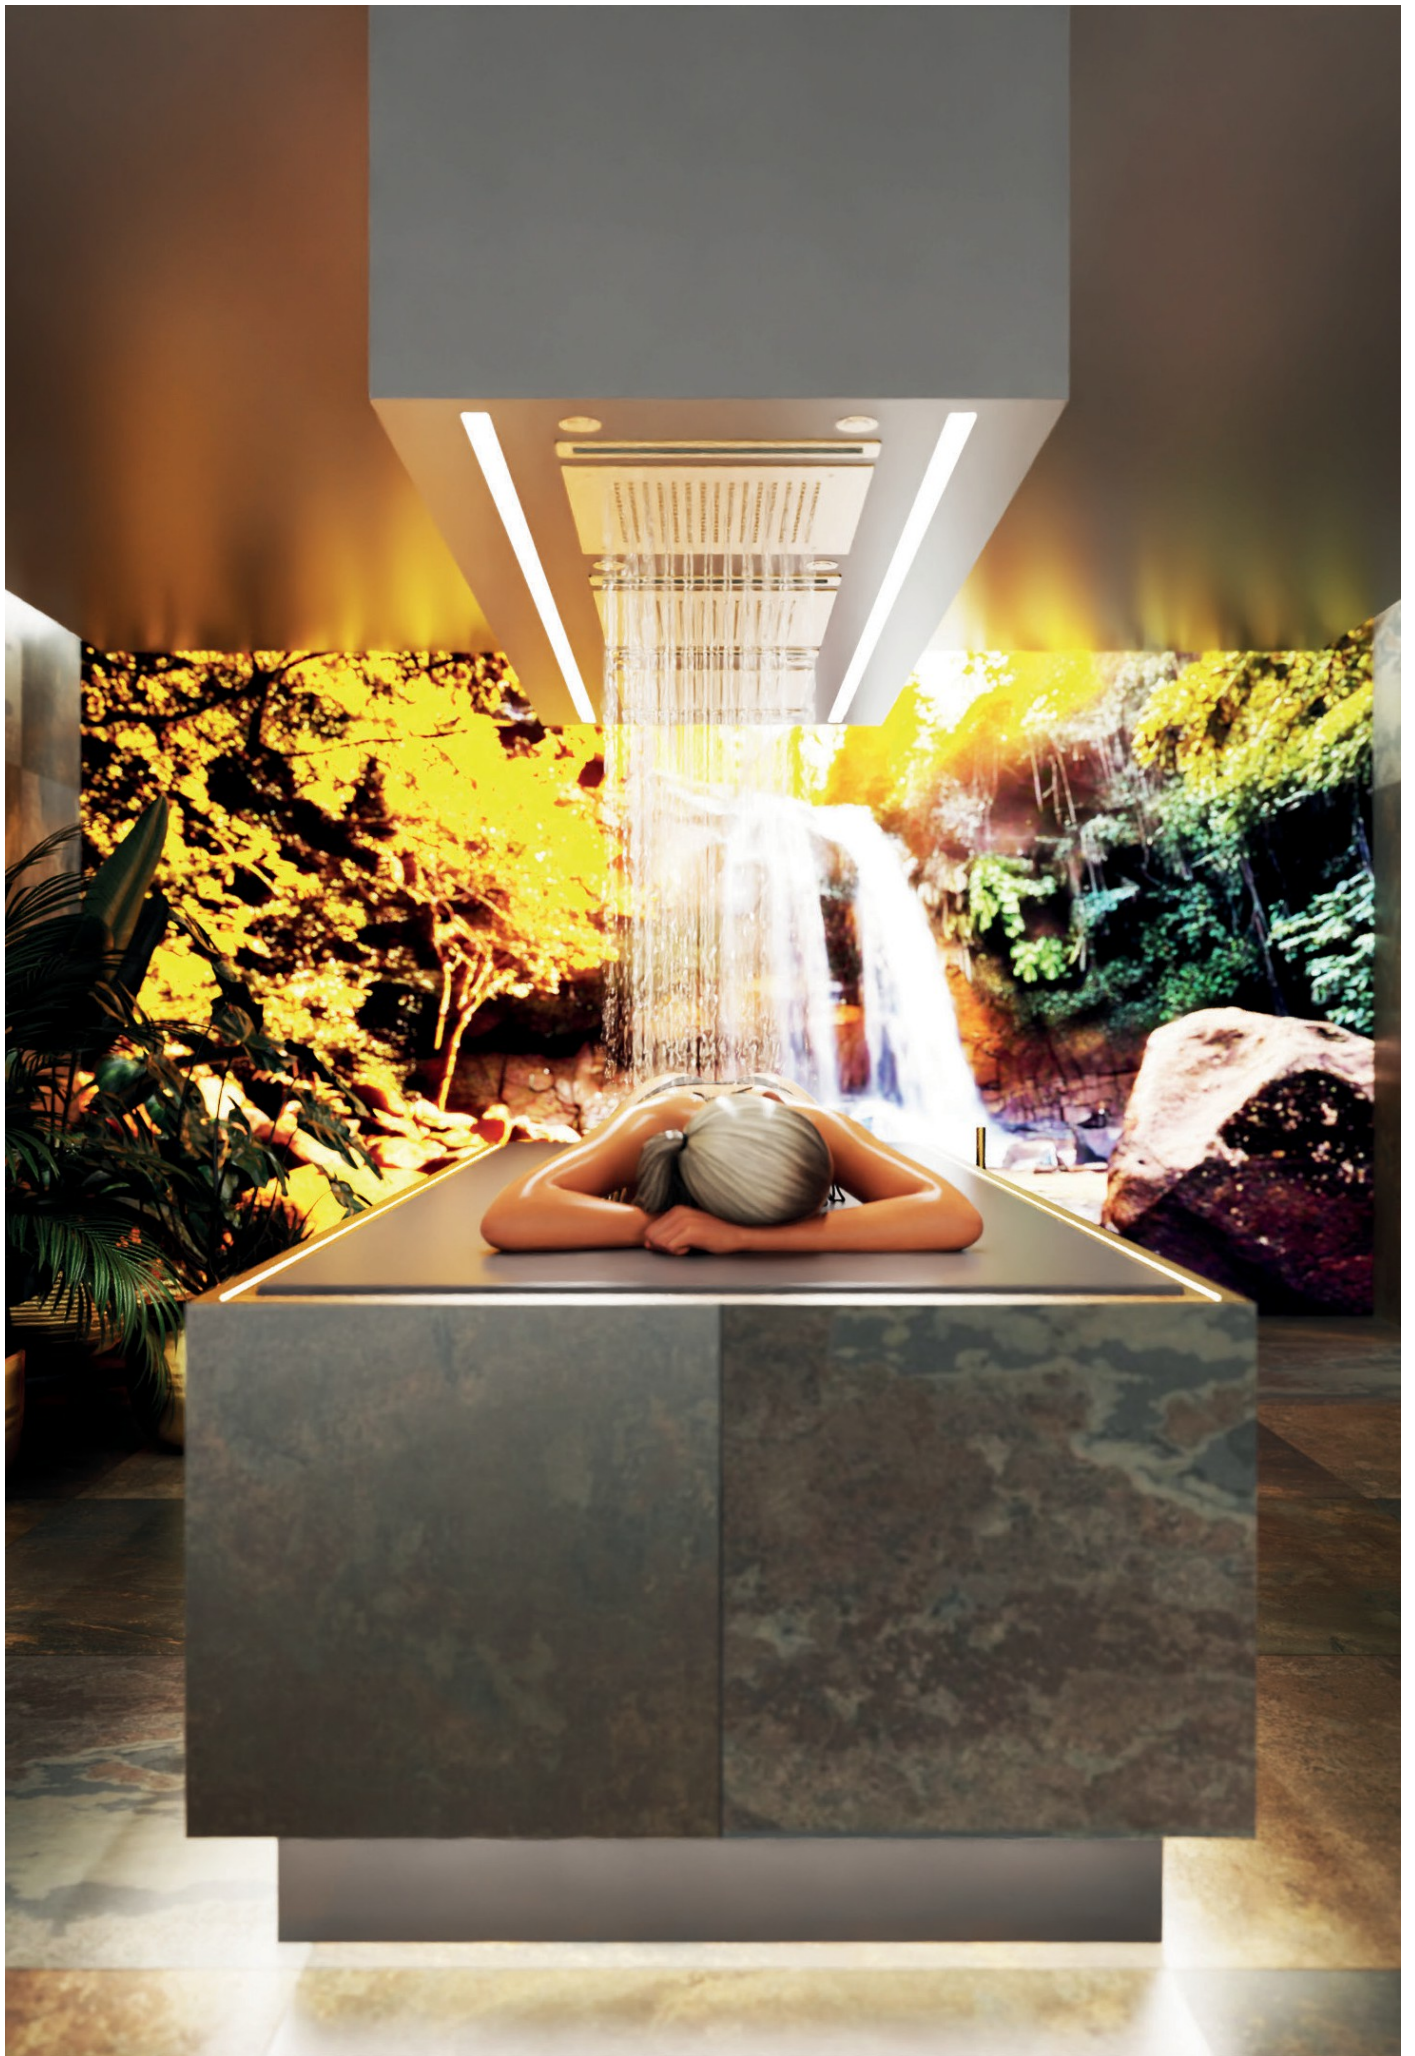

It's important to let your body temperature drop after a sauna or steam bath session. You can do this with the full-body shower: set the temperature to your desired level and start the session.

Effects of the full-body shower after the session

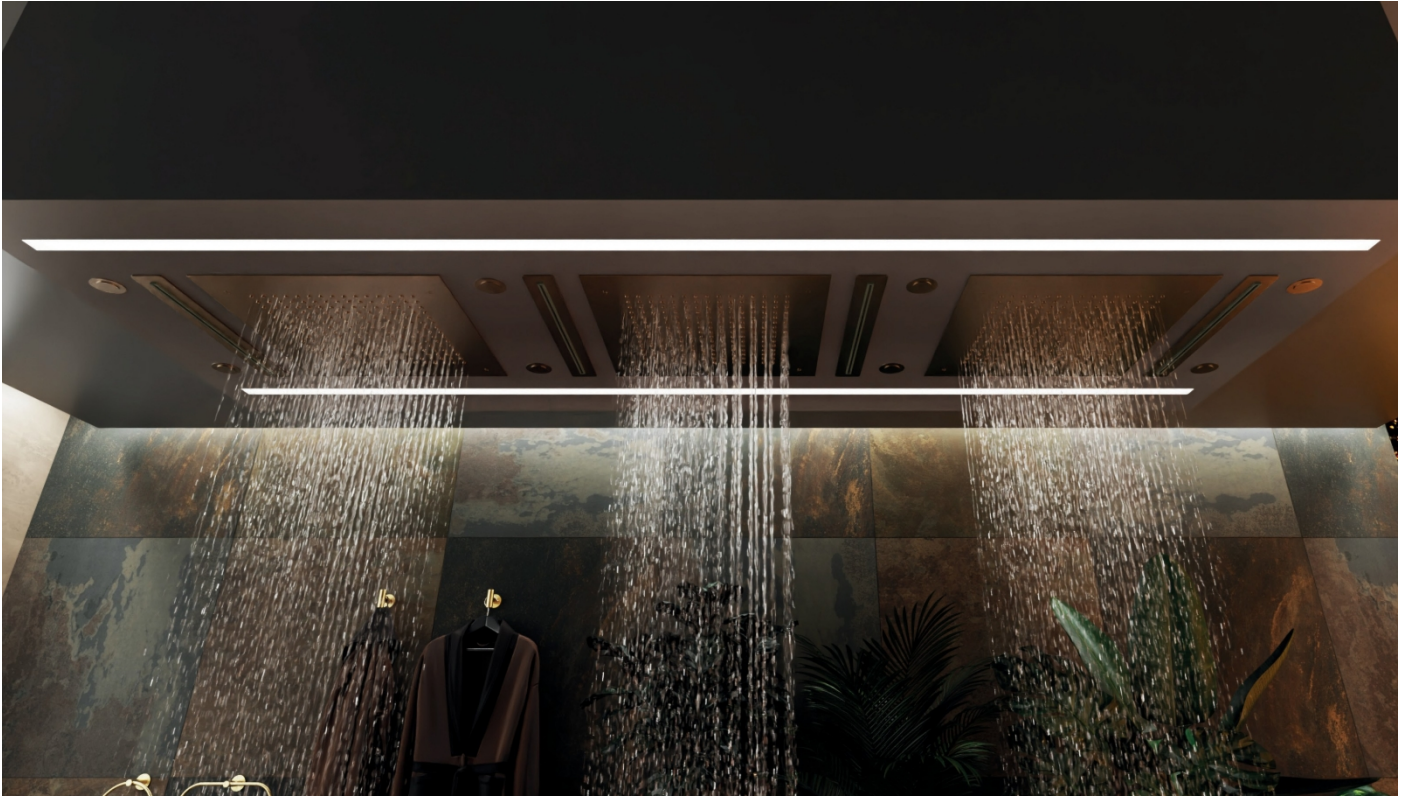

The body is designed to move; if you haven't been able to do so for an extended period, you may experience muscle soreness and/or severe fatigue the first few times.

Ideally, this will subside over time, and you'll begin to feel the benefits of exercise:

- Improved blood circulation
- Reduced stiffness
- Improved well-being and relaxation
